

AKC National Agility Championship Bulldogs

The inaugural AKC National Agility Championship (NAC) event took place in 1996 and is held annually. It is distinctly different from the AKC National Agility Invitational (NAI) event that started in 2006. The NAI was created to showcase the top Agility dogs in every breed (as well as the top mixed breeds referred to as All-Americans). The NAC, however, is not breed specific. The NAC is an event intended for the top agility dogs irrespective of breed, with more challenging eligibility requirements (e.g. 7 QQs in Master for NAC vs 1 Q in Master for NAI) during the annual qualifying period. Some breeds may not have any representatives that meet the NAC eligibility criteria (at least 100 breeds were not entered for the 2021 event).

Per available info, no Bulldogs participated in the NAC prior to 2017. One Bulldog participated in the March 2017 NAC in Perry, GA:
